

money for the repairs of said public roads, at their levy term for each year; provided, however, that said sums so levied shall not exceed in any one year the sum of five thousand dollars.

1878, ch. 499.

101. They are authorized and required to make and adopt any and all rules and regulations that they may consider necessary to secure said repairs on said public roads; to appoint district road commissioners, and such other agents or supervisors as they may deem necessary; provided, however, that said rules and regulations shall be uniform, and the pay of said district commissioners, agents or supervisors shall not exceed the sum of one dollar and fifty cents per day, and that only when actually at work on or superintending the repairs of said road.

Ibid.

102. As soon after each annual levy as practicable, they shall apportion the sum so levied for public roads to the several election districts in said county as they may deem just and fair, and place said lists in the hands of the collectors, to be paid by them to such road accounts as may be passed or approved by said county commissioners.

Ibid.

103. They are authorized to make and pass rules and regulations respecting the appointment and duties of the district road commissioners and all officers necessary to carry this sub-title of this article into execution; to have all obstructions and nuisances removed from the public roads, or near the same, that may inconvenience and endanger travelers; to allow, upon satisfactory proof, owners for gravel, timber and other necessary material needed in repairs of said public roads, and to regulate the mode of ascertaining the value of any gravel, timber or other necessary material in case of a dissatisfied owner; to enter upon any adjacent land, and by ditching or otherwise, to draw the water from said public roads, and to make satisfactory compensation to the owners of said lands for any permanent injury done the same, or for any material taken as aforesaid.
